THE 1929 VIRGINIAN

EX LIBRIS

Believing that the woman of the Old Dominion, from the time of her first step on Virginia's soil, has been the inspirer and the torchbearer of the State, we have paused to pay her tribute for the glorious heritage we have in her. If we have caught her indomitable spirit, her great love, and her idealism, we have proved worthy of her and of our theme, and this 1929 volume of "The Virginian" will stand as a memorial to our Virginia womanhood.

Offering

Anne Carter of Shirley was born in a beautiful old home on the banks of the James. Her home stands in history for its quiet dignity and its old Virginia hospitality, her family ranking among the first in the state. Little is known of her early girlhood, but when quite young she became the second wife of Lighthorse Harry Lee. They had five children, of whom Robert was the fourth.

The father of Lee died when Robert was a child of four: from that time, it was the mother upon whom devolved the responsibility of the teacher and guide. Robert was especially devoted to his mother. When she became an invalid, it was he who took complete care of her. Though broken in body, the heroic little mother urged her son to go away to the United States Military Academy when he arrived of age, saying only, "I shall miss Robert so!"

She was a true Virginia mother, earnest, pious, gentle, and heroic, with an influence mightier than force—one of love.

Dedication

To one who, instilling greatness in her illustrious son, Robert E. Lee, gave through him of herself a heritage of love and sacrifice; to one who, having passed on such a heritage, stands as a representative woman of Virginia, we do reverently dedicate this volume to

Anne Carter of Shirley

In Memoriam

Mrs. Joseph L. Jarman

Died

The twenty-ninth day of the first month, in this year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and twenty-nine

Womanhood of itself is a glorious heritage, but especially so when it has such a background as do the women of Virginia to-day. For this we glorify Virginia's woman that she may be enshrined forever in our hearts.

Mothers of Virginia

Mothers of gallant sons and of daughters reflecting your virtue;
Mothers of "Old Virginia," priding herself in her children;
Mothers of men such as Washington;
Mothers of Lee and Jackson;
Mothers, in war as in peace, gladly making your offering,
Sending from pillared home and from rambling farmhouse
Sons of your love and devotion,
Holding their heritage high above
the slaughter and ruin;
Mothers of modern Virginia;
Mothers of youth, past and present,
Yours was the making of home and the guiding of children.
With delicate, capable hands you held to their hands in the darkness, Led them to the light from the shadows gathering round them,
Unveiled a higher ideal, and pointed
the way to attain it,
Guarded their heritage for them—
Gave a soul to Virginia.
Mothers of our Mother State, your daughters promise allegiance;
Promise, each and each, to pass their heritage downward,
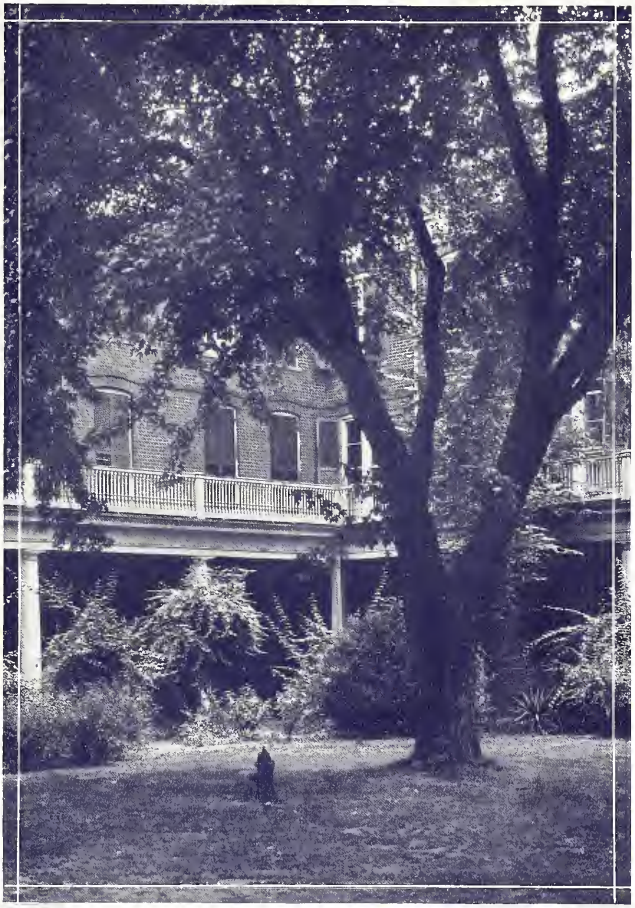
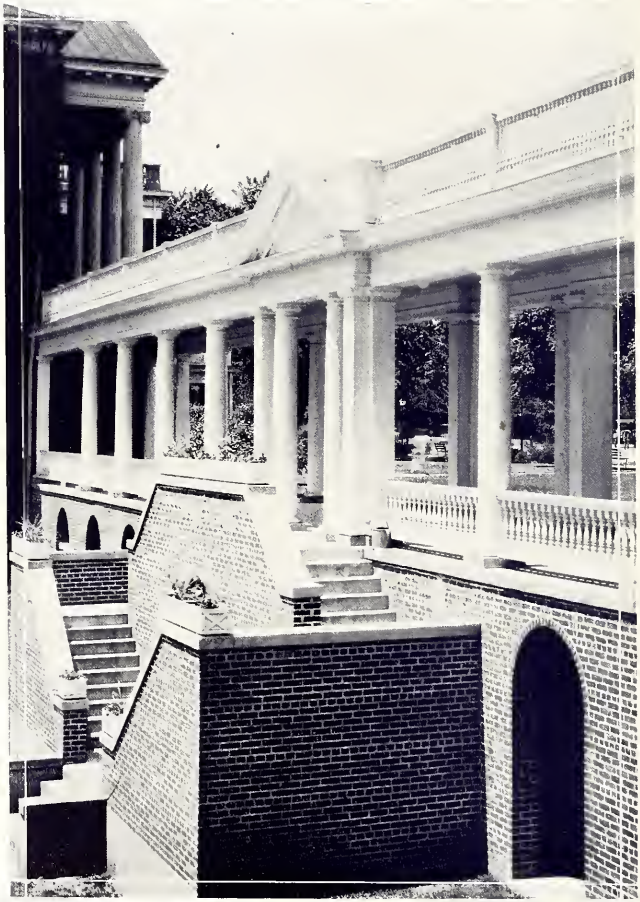
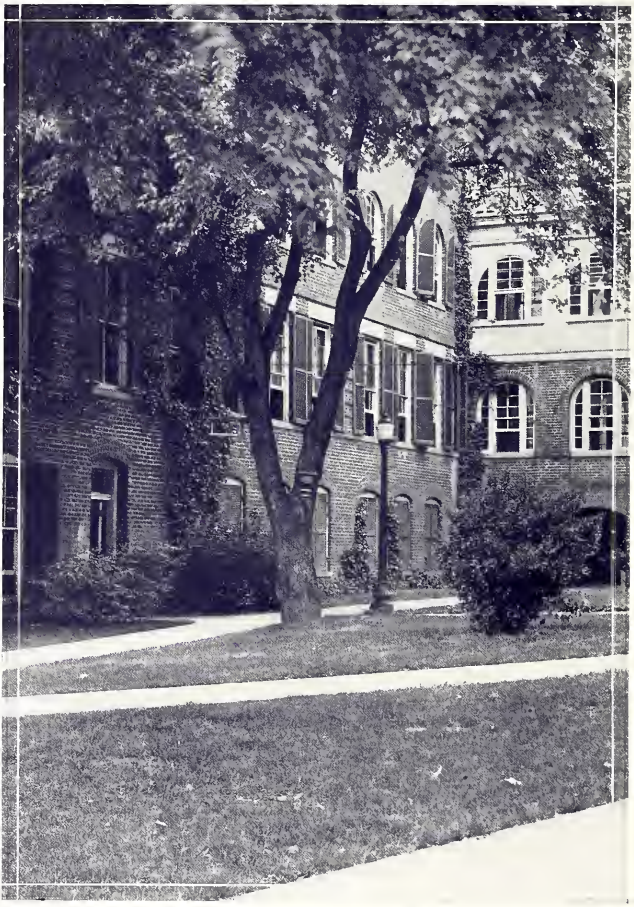
Shining, unsoiled, unspotted—
the dauntless soul of Virginia.

—Carolea Harris, '29.







Appreciation

Our Teachers

"Nor can we overestimate your worth,
Nor ever pay you for the good you do,
But we can own the debt we owe you, can Express our gratitude; prove our love, true!"

A child at a mother's knee,
  Listening with face intent,
Listening with eyes aglow
  To a solemn covenant.

From that covenant of truth
  Taught by a mother guide,
You learned of life and love
  As you sat by your mother's side.

The lesson we teach today,
  The same our mothers taught.
A mission high we hold,
  With sacred memories fraught.

Today, at a teacher's knee
  A child is seated, intent,
Listening with eyes aglow
  To a solemn covenant.

The Revolution

The tenseness of the first critical years of our country's history, when men struggled to subdue nature, and lived and died toiling relentlessly, gradually relaxed as pioneer axes chopped away the forest farther and farther from the sea. Along the river banks and the coastal lowland large estates appeared, great areas marked out in the primeval woods. It was the beginning of the plantation, which marked the transfer of the age-old ideal of a landed gentry of old England to the new country of America. The customs and ideals of the gentry of England, indeed, found congenial environment in the new world, especially in the colony of Virginia. The virtues and vices of the Virginians were those of the corresponding English classes from which they came, modified by conditions which surrounded them in the new country. The population was composed of diverse strains, in the main virile, sociable, sensible, and spirited. The people were hospitable and kindly, pleasant in manner, firm in friendship, fierce in enmity, stout in opinions when once they were formed, and tenacious of their rights.

Even though life in old Virginia was gay, carefree, and rigorous, with card playing, drinking, dancing and horse racing, yet, it was, on the whole, clean and stimulating. There was an indefinable charm about the plantation life of Virginia with its simplicity and gaiety. That charm seemed to pervade even the atmosphere, which, perfumed with the fragrance of flowers, and permeated with the clear notes of the mocking bird, seemed to soothe one's senses and lull him into a state of content.

But this serene and simple life was soon invaded by the blinding smoke, the deafening roar, the ghastly horrors of war. The Virginian aristocracy, a liberty loving, independent race, contributed heavily to that small group of able men who fought the Revolution and made our nation a shrine of liberty. There was a quality in their heritage and a "fineness of texture in their society" which produced men of great mind and broad sympathies, a quality which was shown to the world during the Revolutionary period in men like Washington, Jefferson, and Henry. From the secluded homes under their great oaks, far from the bustle, din, and strife, came the men who made our constitution, our government, our nation.

—Louise Woodson.

Mother of Virginia

We give tribute to the woman, who, with a brave face, gave her wealth, her home, her sons, her husband, for the Lost Cause; we praise her who bravely sacrificed all that she had in the Great War; but do we think of her who turned this wild land of ours into a peaceful habitation? Let us give to her the praise which she so richly deserves —this woman who was the first to leave a safe home and friends to cross the wide ocean in a fragile boat to form a new home amongst the hardships of an uncultivated land. Was it easy, do you think, to leave a safe and well-known home to come to an unsafe and unknown land? Yet—she came. With a laugh in her eyes, a song on her lips, and a prayer in her heart, she made a home from a rude cabin of four walls. She filled that home with love, with gentleness, and with culture. She gave to her sons and daughters the love of beauty, the love of courtesy, and the love of love which she had brought from her own land. So to her, the pioneer woman of Virginia, we owe homage for the courage, the faith, the ideals which she gave to us, her sons and daughters. To her we give praise as the Mother of Virginia, first Lady of the State.

—Kathryn Forrest, '31.

My Lady of Loyalties

Listen to the voices
Of Virginia's women—bearers of freedom;
For they speak of soldiers
And the countless, unknown heroines
Of patriotism.
In their far-seeing eyes
Lie all memories of the past—
Memories of war and peace.
The voices speak of
The mothers of Virginia's soldiers,
The women patriots
Who all but fought the battles,
So bravely did they serve
When, seeking freedom from the tyrant,
Washington asked aid. . . . .
My Lady of Loyalties stands
Unmindful of past glory,
Mindful only of the hopes,
The verities and the visions
Of the years that remain
For Virginia's women.

Requisite

I do not love her for her face
  So like a perfect flower,
Nor for the wisdom, charm, and grace
  God gave her for a dower,
But for her heart which doth impart
From out its depths so pure and sweet
An understanding all-complete.

—Alice St. Ables Harrison, '32.

Shadows

Shut within the stately walls of a room
On a high back settle before the cedar fire—
I sit, musing, entranced
By the fragrance of the cedar and the flitting shadows.

Suddenly, I behold a stately troup
Who come laughingly—happily, in my dream,
The ladies fair who love their tea, their laces,
and the minuet;
The men their loves, their port wine, whist, and horses.

The fire glows lower, shadows deepen,
See—on their faces new purpose is written!
Tiring of whist, of chess and of tea,
Virginia grows restless for freedom—

Freedom from the tyrant's power,
Linking hands with her neighbors
She gives a Washington and a Jefferson.

My shadows are gone—my fire is cold,
I must waken—for I am young,
My life is yet to be lived,
Lived in the glory of Virginia's womanhood!

—Katy Friel Sanders, '32.

Heritage

Ours not a mere dream
Of the lauded deeds of long ago;
Ours not a fairy fancy,
Woven of shadowy stuff—
But a golden thread
That weaves its living strand forever—
Through Yesterday
And Tomorrow.

Gone are your broad plantations;
Gone forever your wide hoop-skirts;
Gone, too, your slaves of ante-bellum days;
Vanished your long elm-shaded lanes
That used to wind up the bordered path,
To the great white house,
With its cool veranda.

Faded now, the brilliant hues
Which threaded in and out the tapestry
of Life,
But still untarnished that golden thread
That weaves its living strand forever—
Through Yesterday,
And Tomorrow.

—Elizabeth Rawls, '29.

Activities

Unvanquished

Shenandoah Valley, with the beauty of green fields and prosperous farm houses, was changed; ruin was there in the fruitful fields; ashes were the only remains of once beautiful mansions. Discouragement was everywhere for every Southerner. Yet the cause was boldly pressed. Men were succored by the women of Virginia; they served with all the unselfishness of patriots. Food was scarce —so scarce that cassena, yaupon, blackberry and sassafras leaves were used for tea; coffee found its substitute in parched wheat, rye, and okra. Candles of myrtle berries gleamed in the candelabra where imported tapers once had proudly glowed. Patient hands now toiled on homespun cloth with needles of thorn. Roberta Pollock and Sally Tompkins were the Joans of Arc of a suffering South. They eased the dying soldier's pain through a film of tears that oft clouded their eyes; they smiled and prayed and gave their all to Virginia.

—Katherine Schroeder, '31.

The Honor System

To live our life at its best, to grow into wider freedom, to make and to accept the pervasive college spirit, to leave Farmville a little stronger than we found it—for this the Honor System came into being and for this the Student Government Association exists.

To Virginia's Women

Through the gold of the sunset sky
  They come with eager tread:
An army of women, true mothers of men,
  Smiling and pointing ahead.

Once stately they stood in tall mirrored rooms,
  Mid luxury, and flattery of men,
In laughter they lived, the pride of their homes,
  But, alas, that joy had to end!

For mothers and daughters alike felt the sting
  Of war's unmerciful hand:
Yet, tender and strong in their undying love,
  They guarded their homes and their land.

They gave of their beauty, their youth, and their strength
  To those who were wounded and marred:
They smiled to the world, while deep in their hearts
  Grief struck with a hot burning rod.

So now, when we enter the hallowed homes
  That once they fashioned with care,
May we feel a true and a noble pride
  In those women so fine, and so rare!

Forever they'll live in their old homesteads,
  Their imprint is left full and clear,
No harsh wind of time can ever undo
  What they did for those they held dear.

And so, they will live in the hearts
  Of the State they sustained through distress:
They loved her in war and in peace,
  And now, in her heart, they find rest.

—Loulie Milner, '32.

Code of Ethics of the Pan-Hellenic Association

This association desires to go on record as believing that membership in the association obligates every sorority on its roll and every initiate thereof

To co-operate with college authorities.

To respect and obey the letter and the spirit of any agreement made by the college and the association.

To refrain from the discussion of sorority disagreements.

To refrain from speaking disparagingly of any sorority or non-sorority girl.

To regulate personal conduct so that it shall at all times conform in spirit and appearance with the accepted standards of good breeding.

To conduct all rushing as inconspicuously as possible and to make the lines of demarcation between sorority and non-sorority girls as slight as possible.

To remember that of those to whom much is given, much is required.

To remember that sorority badge is not a mark of superiority, but a pledge to high endeavor.

To remember that the unity of sororities in the teacher's field means mutual improvement and protection, and to maintain the high standards for which the teachers must strive.

To remember that a girl who smokes, drinks, or breaks college rules, is not conforming to the letter or to the spirit of Pan-Hellenic standards.

Vanity Fair

Fulfillment

Young women coming from homes of culture,
Walking forth on the highways of the world,
And all its devious bypaths,
Entering the several worlds of concrete facts:
Dynamic womanhood at work!
Broadening horizons for the sake of future
Young women and young men, yet to come!

Gay with a gaiety—daring in all proportions—
Gowning herself in a length of some bright harmony.
Caring for appearance, knowing beauty is a cultivated thing;
Pursuing in mad pace for all of love and life
And laughter which the world may offer;
Smiling lips, bright eyes, and withal,
A heart of deep understanding.

A heart set on higher things which has not forgot
Wisdom learned at a mother's knee.
Gracious, idealistic, capable of true reasoning,
So stands our paradox of Virginia—
Visions of days now dim in shadows,
Visions, caught by women in all
The paths of life and its dwelling places,
Shimmering about her.

Courage from women of pioneer hardships,
From the days of Pocahontas,
Love of liberty and freedom
Speaking through her sons, Henry and Jefferson.
Women weeping, but with gentle hands
Serving, sacrificing for Virginia,
Giving of their sons and husbands
To a Lee, a Jackson.

Oh women of Virginia's morrow!
Press toward the visions that we seek—
We hold for you the torch of womanhood,
Our heritage of light!

From Me to You

Nancy Nelms: "What makes the Tower of Pisa lean?"
M. Hubbard: "Well, I wish I knew, I sure would try some of it."

Miss Peck: "What was George Washington noted for?"
Lil Bennett: "His memory."
Miss Peck: "What makes you think his memory was so great?"
Lil: "Why, you know they erected a monument to it."

Red: "Now don't be catty."
Mayo: "Oh, don't get mad—I was only 'kitten'."

Clara Norfleet: "My uncle has addressed all the people in the United States."
Mary Simmerman: "He must be a wonderful orator."
Clara: "No—he mails catalogues for Sears-Roebuck."

Evelyn Thompson: "What does a cat get when he walks across the desert?"
Alfreda Collings: "I don't know."
Evelyn: "Why, 'Sandy Claws'."

Dumb: "Does a woman scalp the man she sets out to capture?"
Bell: "Oh—yes, that's why so many husbands are baldheaded."

A magazine writer tells us that a dog fills an empty space in man's life. We would like to say this is especially true of the hot dog at 10:00 o'clock.

Liz Watkins: "I found all the poets you gave me but one, Mr. Grainger!"
Mr. Grainger: "And who was that?"
Liz: "It was Anonymous."

A cannibal said to his mate,
My dear, I have the
tummy ache,
Oh, yes—'tis that sweet girl grad-u-ate.

Pannie: "I didn't know you could send animals through the mail."
Alice Covington: "Why, Pannie, of course you can't!"
Pannie: "That's funny, this morning I got a letter with a seal on it."

Diplomas were invented because some students need a written evidence that they are educated.

Which reminds us of the absent-minded professor who told the story of the absent-minded professor who wound the clock and put the cat out.

Freshman (having picture made for the annual): "How much is it?"
Lucille Norman: "Do you have any extra cuts?"
Freshman: "Why—yes—I cut Chapel this morning!"

Girlish Gossip

Did I scare you? The proctor didn't see me; this hall is so dark. Gee! I like halls like this one—one can't tell who you are when noise just happens. What did you do on your test? We didn't have a thing I expected—that last question—why, he must have stayed up all night thinking of that. I really mean it was hard.

Oh! Did you hear the latest? Red Foster has cut her hair again. Oh, yes—just when she's been letting it grow out for months. Now isn't that like Red? No, I don't know what Pannie said about it. She's too taken up with her basketball coaching class. Is it true that she goes down there at night by herself to practice? That is a thought!

Have you noticed Gurley's huge grin here lately? . . . and there's an extra letter in her box, too. Speaking of letters and boxes, do you know anyone who would like to rent part of a box? I'm not using mine any longer.

That last yawn was enough. I've taken the hint, but before I go, answer one question for me, will you? Am I one person or two? Now don't laugh. I mean it seriously. Today as I was going down that hall by the post office Miss Taliaferro leaned over that board she has up there on the door and said, "Walk single file, please," and I just couldn't understand how one person could walk double file. Well, I'll be seeing you—

—"Becky."

Senior Last Will and Testament

We, the Senior class, bequeath to the Junior class the dignity that we assume for one hour every Saturday morning.

I, Anne Faree, leave to every Junior my secret process so that they too may have extra long eyelashes.

Being of sound mind and sounder judgment, I, Frances Willis, leave to Frances Hatchett my athletic ability.

I, Louise Foster, bequeath to the next president of the Senior class my ability to become dignified on a moment's notice.

We, the Senior Class, would like to leave Miss Mary enough slips so that every girl can go home every week-end next year.

I, Margaret Finch, leave my wonderful memory to any Junior that may need it. It is in perfect condition, having never been used.

I, Anne Chapin, to the remaining members of the student body, leave my childish ways and sweet voice.

I, Louise Vaughn, would like to leave to all treasurers some secret process so they can collect dues, if there be such.

We, the Senior class of 1929, with pleasure bequeath to Miss M. K. Talliferro a student body walking on rubber heels.

I, Ethel Willey, leave to our next jumping center, about five feet of my height so she can get the tip off in all basketball games.

I, Katherine Rhodes, leave my ability to stand up, under all circumstances, to any Junior who has difficulty along that line.

I, Lois Fraser, leave my baby face to any Freshman who wants to look young.

I, Mary Selden, leave my huge mouth to any Freshman who finds large words choking.

I, Edith Page, leave my auburn hair to the incoming Freshmen so they won't have to buy Golden Glint.

—"Becky."
